

Overview

The ECT conferences are promoted by the European Thermoelectric Society (ETS) and are the primary annual gathering events in Europe in the field of thermoelectrics (TE).

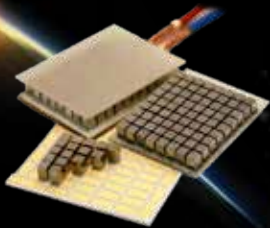

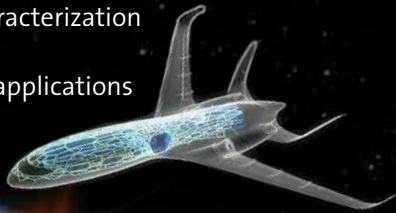

The aim of the ECT 2013 conference is to honour the ECT conferences' tradition of bringing together innovative academics and industrial experts in the field of thermoelectrics and to promote high quality scientific and technological information interchange of the latest developments on TE materials and module design, manufacturing, and testing.

The New Materials & Energy Unit of the European Space Agency is the organizer of the ECT 2013. We welcome the participation of the international community of professionals working in the field of thermoelectrics who are committed to contribute substantially to the technological advances necessary for significantly improving the efficiency and the sustainability of (waste) energy conversion systems.

Topics of interest

Papers are solicited on the wide range of scientific research from basic science to applications in thermoelectrics like:

- Theoretical modelling
- Novel TE materials
- Multi-scale TE properties
- Measurement & characterization
- TE standardisation
- System & industrial applications

Abstracts and Journal Publications

Abstracts should be submitted through the submission form on the Conference site at:

<http://congrexprojects.com/13a05/abstract-submission>

Abstracts must be submitted by 1 August 2013

Upon acceptance of the abstract, authors are invited to submit a full-length paper.

Papers must be submitted by 7 October 2013

In addition, a selection of manuscripts will be forwarded for publication in a special issue of the Journal of Electronic Materials. The candidate papers will be selected by the ECT 2013 Program Committee and will be communicated to the authors after the conference.

Key Dates

1 August 2013	Abstract submission deadline
1 August 2013	Early registration deadline
